D.

1. D, d. This letter was dropped before v, which letter either remained unaltered or was changed into b: thus, viginti for dviginti (from duo); bellum for duellum; bis for duis. — The letter d also became assimilated with the consonant immediately following: thus, ad-sum was changed into assum, ad-fero into affero, ad-peto into appeto, etc.; hence, by contraction, sedela becomes sella. D was entirely suppressed before s: thus, from lapis we have lapis; from frond-s, frons; from lud-si, lusi; from ad-sto, asto; from ad-stringo, astringo. D, as an abbreviation, denotes decimus; it also stands for deus, divus, dominus, dies, dat. — D. O. M. = Deo Optimo Maximo; D. N. = Dominus noster; a. d. = ante diem (see ANTE); D. D. = dono, or donum, dedit; D. D. D. = dat, dicat, dedicat. [m. d. s., misce, da, scribe, NL.]

2. D. As a numerical sign, for 500, formed from the one half of the sign D or CIO for 1000.
